

Your work:

- Are you a student or are you working?

I am working.

- Can you describe your job to me?

I am working as a marketing manager at British Council Vietnam. My main job is to work out marketing and promotion strategies that will improve the reputation of British Council Vietnam. I have worked in this position for nearly 5 years.

- Where are you working?

I am working in the headquarter of British Council Vietnam, which is located in Thuy Khue Road, a part of Tay Ho District.

- Why did you choose that job?

I chose British Council Vietnam because I would like to work in an international environment, where my language skills can massively improve. In addition to this, British Council Vietnam is well-known for its good working conditions as well as health and safety care for its staff. It is an ideal job in an ideal environment.

- Do you enjoy your job? And if so, why?

I greatly enjoy my job because first of all, it gives me a good salary and helps me obtain a decent living. Secondly, what is important is that I am doing a job that I have been thinking of for many years. I would like an occupation that involves the use of advertising campaigns and multi-media strategies.

- How about your employers and colleagues? Do you have a good relationship with them?

I am lucky because I am working with a team of passionate, hard-working and creative people. Other executives at British Council Vietnam are also very experienced. They give me a lot of financial support and professional advices when I start a new marketing project.

- What are the things that you like and do not like about your workplace?

The facilities and security at my workplace are of extremely high quality. Fingerprint-scanning and voice-recognition machines are available to ensure the safety of staff. However, I think British Council Vietnam should increase the variety of dishes in its canteens and reduce waiting times when people come to buy food. And as a marketing manager, I should organise more events outside work hours to help staff reduce working stress.

- Do you have any plan to change your job in the future?

Within the next 3 or 4 years, I think the answer is no. My job is getting more popular in Vietnam and therefore it is becoming increasingly competitive. Achieving a job status as I do now is no longer easy and I am not going to throw away this opportunity.
